So Many Worlds . . .

So Much To Do
At Nappanee High

Each day within the confines of Nappanee High School we, her students, seek a newer world. Among the many worlds found beyond the open doors of our school is the world of accomplishment, one never ceasing; our world of knowledge found in our classrooms; and our world of fun made up of music, laughter, last-minute plans, whispering couples, a convertible filled with screaming fans, and lasting friendships.

This, the thirty-fifth volume of the Napanet, was published to give its readers a complete history of the year 1959-60 in N.H.S., to show the many "worlds" in which we live.

Our world of study, friendships and sports;
Our clubs and social life of all sorts;
Reviewing the old, exploring the new;
So Many Worlds . . . So Much To Do.

Our World of STUDY

Through diligent study we grasp a "world" of knowledge and achievement. We are uncovering new facts each day; new horizons are being discovered, and old ones are becoming better understood. It's not only the three R's of Grandfather's school days, but now specialized courses are also offered to meet every student's need. As you will see on the following pages, this "world" affords the students education and training for a position in later life.

A theme to write, a speech to plan;
Latin to translate, poetry to scan;
A chemistry test, and history, too;
Our World of STUDY . . So Much To Do.

English is the basis of our curriculum . . .

The students are enrolled in English courses most of the years they are in high school. The college preparatory course requires the student to take it all four years, and three years are required for the practical English course. In these classes the students learn the basic fundamentals and mechanics of our language. Composition writing is emphasized to teach us to express ourselves clearly and to use correctly the knowledge of our language.

Literature is taught during the second semester of the English courses. In these classes students are helped to overcome reading difficulties and to improve techniques, speed, and interpretation.

Students who enroll in the speech class are trained in correct, fluent, and persuasive public speaking. Besides participating in many speeches, debates, and discussions they take part in the skit at the Halloween Festival and the play given for the student body at Christmas time.

Maxine Welty and Marietta Holderman are feverishly seeking material for their research papers—a requirement for the first semester of senior English.

Sandy Warren is putting on the bulletin board some of the exceptional themes written by students in her sophormore English class, as Jane Lakins and Roger Holdeman take time out to read them.

Appearing in a scene of the Christmas play, Song of Glory, are Jerry Elmore, Lou Ann Wyman, Marlene Parks, Steve Price, Linda Price, Susie Neibert, and George Freese, all members of the speech class.

Mathematics and science

Algebra I, taken primarily by freshmen, opens a way to the many worlds of mathematics by teaching its students the fundamentals and rules for solving equations.

One of these worlds is Algebra II. This subject gives the advanced math student further study of such things as graphs, systems of equations, ratios, proportions, and variations, plus more algebraic rules. Algebra II is taken by those who want either a major or minor in mathematics and have completed Algebra I.

Plane and solid geometry, offered alternately with the two courses of algebra, enable any student to have four years of mathematics.

General math is for those students who wish to fulfill the requirement of one year of math but who do not wish to study algebra. In this class students learn techniques in working mathematical problems with which they will probably be faced when they are out of high school. Some examples of these are fractions, basic constructions, and percentages.

Mathematics plays an important role in our world of study.

Top picture. Gary Croy is demonstrating how the perpendicular of a triangle bisects its base as Susie Hartman points out the procedure to Dick Pippenger. Bottom picture. Diane Hare, Mike Egolf, Bill Hollar, and Karen McFall are all working hard to figure out a problem on percentages in their general math class.

Using logarithms and the slide rule to solve their advanced algebra problems, as Edward Getz, Jerry Elmore, and Kent Stuckman are doing here, really saves time . . . and work, too.

create inquisitive minds . . .

The courses of science offered at N.H.S. include biology, chemistry, and physical science. One year of science is required for graduation and this requirement may be met with any of these courses.

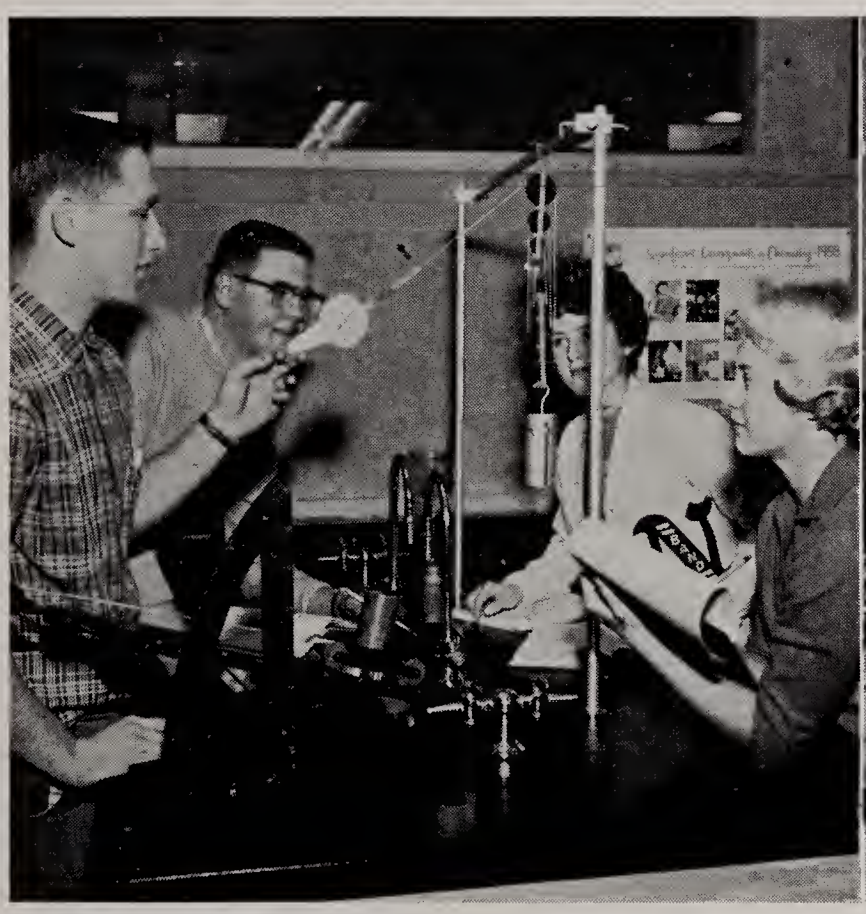
In biology the students learn to classify many plants and animals from the simplest forms to the most complex. During the year they disect many different animals and also learn more about their habits and makeup.

Besides learning the names of the different elements and their physical and chemical properties, the chemistry classes do many experiments in the well equipped laboratories of N.H.S. Only juniors and seniors may take this elective course which alternates yearly with physics.

Physical science, which is taken by students who do not wish to study physics or chemistry but who wish to further their background in the sciences, gives the students a general knowledge of almost all sciences.

Through these courses, students are grasping a wealth of information for a world demanding superior knowledge of mathematics and science.

Judy Wright is observing some small, one-celled animals, invisible to the naked eye. But, with the aid of the microscope, she can see the minute creatures found in the "hay infusion" she prepared.



Bob Stouder, Gary Eastlund, Linda Heckaman, and Mary Duckwall are recording the force needed to lift a weight with the help of a series of six pulleys.

through social studies . . .

Top picture. In her U.S. History class Kathy Ringenberg points out to Steve Quigley and Loren Berger the part of the world best known to us, the United States. Bottom picture. In government and economics the seniors keep up with current events by discussing them one hour each week. Chuck McFall, Norma Kohler, and Sarah Miller are considering the steel strike.

In order to graduate, all seniors are required to take one semester of U.S. Government and one semester of economics. The former gives the seniors a better understanding of how our government operates on the local, state, and national bases; and economics acquaints them with important trends in making a living. Through lectures, group and panel discussions, and films these students learn more about the great heritage of our United States.

U.S. History, which is required for all juniors, encourages the students to take an interest in the story of America including everything from the adventures of Columbus to current events.

To learn more about the historical background of other countries like France, Germany, and Great Britain students enroll in the elective subject, World History. This course also gives the students a view of the changing times of the past centuries and how they fit into our own history.

Alice Culp and Gary Schneck are indicating by the map how their study of World History acquaints them with many countries.

all countries of our vast world . . .

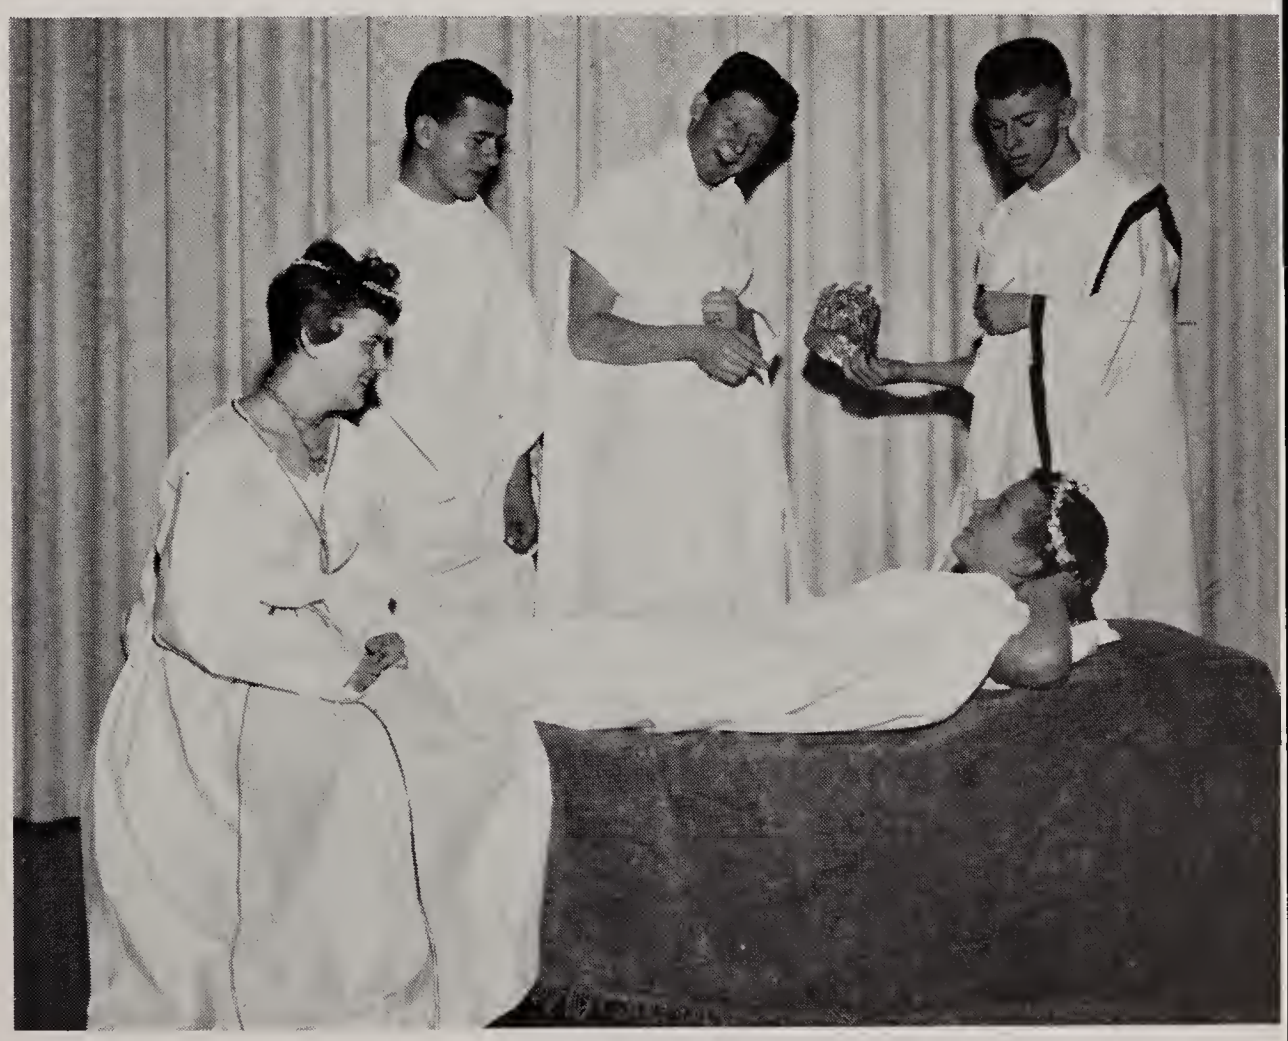
Ancient Rome is a point of great interest for people traveling to Italy as Ron Kendall, Roy McDonald, Tina Knoble and Ruth Stuckey, students of Latin II, are observing from the map.

and through languages.

Rome wasn't built in a day and neither can a knowledge of Latin. Latin is the basic foundation for other languages around the globe. A great many English words are derived from Latin roots, and these are studied in both years of Latin offered at N.H.S. The first year includes a general study of the language of the Romans, and Latin II is primarily about Julius Caesar.

Latin is almost a necessity for vocations dealing with medicine, such as doctors, nurses, and pharmacists. Many scientists also find a knowledge of Latin helpful.

The Latin classes have an annual feast called the "Roman Banquet," which is held early in the spring. The menu is strictly Roman and the after dinner entertainment is furnished by the students of Latin II, as illustrated in the picture below. Costumes and music enhance this annual event.



This is a scene taken from the play given at the Roman Banquet. Appearing in this musical comedy, "The Death of Caesar," are Karen S. George, Loren Berger, Roy McDonald, Roger Holderman, and Ron Kendall, a very much alive Julius Caesar.

Varying interests are Home Economics and Shop . . .

For the girls, home economics offers unlimited ideas for future home management and provides excellent preparation for the modern homemaker of tomorrow. From the freshman to the senior year it teaches the basic skills of planning and cooking balanced meals, setting the table correctly, and decorating the home.

Because of the modern sewing equipment, the girls have an opportunity to work industriously in their wardrobe planning and sewing course. In addition, home nursing and child care are taught during the second year. As a highlight of the senior year, the 'matrimony minded' girls carefully plan their own weddings from their color schemes to refreshments. What could be a finer climax?

It's not just a women's world, for the boys have special interests, too. Their work is done in the shop department where various courses include drafting, wood and metalworking, and mechanics.

Besides the freshman requirement of a semester of both woodworking and drafting, advanced machine and architectural drawing are taught along with metalworking on the lathes, as shown in the picture below. This course is taught for a two hour period. The first hour is spent in the classroom and the other hour in the shop working with the autos or metalworking machinery.

Shirley Fisher stands patiently as Gloria Swihart pins up the hem in her skirt, a garment required for the first year of home economics.

This industrious looking crew, Tom King, Lyle Faulkner, Fred Slabaugh, Jay Stouder, and Bob Slabaugh are working on their projects at the metal lathes.

While Marlene Parks and Betty Andrews varnish their decorative fall plaques, Linda Heckaman and Judy Schori study a finished product.

Music, Art, Business, too.

"Music makes the world go 'round," and it plays an important role in our worlds, too. Concerts and football halftime shows are produced by our music department, one of the finest in this area. Band and chorus both stress the idea of working together to present a finished product—music.

Students of art have a chance to test their creativeness and originality. Classmates act as models and seasons of the year influence their type of work. They learn to use different mediums such as water colors, pastels, oil paints, and just plain pencils.

The art classes are responsible for bulletin board displays, for decorating the halls before basketball and football games, and for providing banquet and dance decorations—all duties which they performed very well this year.

Business courses at N.H.S. include typing, shorthand, and bookkeeping. Co-ordination between quick movements and thoughts is emphasized in typing and shorthand. In bookkeeping the students are familiarized with real business and its operation, plus the use of a ten-key adding machine.

Yes, our first world is just what it implies, a "world of study." Now, turn the page and meet the people who give life to our many worlds at N.H.S.

Maxine Welty checks the work as Lou Ann Wyman makes a computation on the adding machine. This necessary procedure is familiar in the bookkeeping class.

Our World of FRIENDS

Our associations with a great variety of friends enrich our lives by broadening our personalities and bringing us many unforgettable memories. Daily in the halls of N.H.S. we meet the bustling, book-ladened student; the devoted, understanding teacher; the dedicated principal; the efficient secretary; and the industrious nurse, custodian, and cook working behind the scenes. All play an important part in keeping our world of friends in orbit.

Our World of FRIENDS, constantly growing;
The people we meet, we profit from knowing;
In many activities, the whole year through,
All working together with so much to do.

Indiana University

Mr. Osborn makes dreams come true for the Nappanee schools. He is in charge of school business affairs and through speaking and writing keeps the programs and problems before the public. On numerous occasions he speaks to the student body, giving helpful information, advice, and encouragement.

Dedicated also to public service, he currently holds the position of chairman of the Technical Advisory Committee for County School Reorganization. He also serves on the Department of Educational Television Committee, and is President of the South Bend Field Chapter of Phi Delta Kappa, the national education fraternity.

Board of Trustees assures excellency.

The administrative group of our school is the Board of School Trustees which aims to maintain for our community a high school that qualifies for the North Central Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges.

Planning the school policies, controlling the financial budget, and administering other business details that are the responsibility of the board consume many hours of the members' time.

The members of the Board of School Trustees are left to right: Haskell Osborn; Dale Christner, secretary; Loren Hahn; Warren Hawley; Lowell McCuen, treasurer; Forrest Kendall, president.

Mr. Weddle has a time consuming hobby—Nappanee High School. In many ways and with many people he gives attention to matters of concern of the school. He is sponsor of the Student Council and National Honor Society, gives counsel and guidance to students in their selection of courses and vocations, and encourages further education to all students.

He is active in the State and National Secondary School Principals Associations and the High School-College Co-operation Committee of the state. He is a highly respected man in the public eye and is presently serving as vice president of the Nappanee Kiwanis Club.

Mr. Weddle prepares to make an announcement to the student body over the intercom system.

The two school secretaries work to keep all school records up to date. Mildred Phillips, left, is Mr. Weddle's secretary and Patricia Coppes is secretary to Mr. Osborn.

Carolyn Stichter, Judy Otto, Frances Fike, Martha Stuckey, Martha Robinson, Sherrilyn Gonser, Pauline Ketzel, and Judy Lewis work during their study halls as office assistants. Inez Rogers, treasurer of the school activity funds, works efficiently balancing all monetary affairs of the clubs and special departments of the school.

Teaching at N.H.S. entails much more than six hours of classroom instruction. Most of the teachers on the staff sponsor classes and clubs in their many activities through the year. Our coaches, too, have a big undertaking with many hours of practice and work-out. All these extra activities add to their already big responsibility of teaching, which includes their own homework of preparing lessons and tests, and grading papers and essays.

In the summer months, many faculty members take advanced college courses and attend workshops to further their education. Weekly meetings and committee work aid teachers in broadening their professional outlook. Devotion to arts, civic activities, church, and home characterizes the outside interests of our superior teaching staff.

Health, maintenance, transportation,

Mrs. Anna Woodhams, R.N., directs the matters of health in our schools.

Mrs. Woodhams, the school nurse, divides her time among the three Nappanee schools. She maintains a spotless, well-stocked office where she looks after the general health of the student body by checking for contagious diseases and testing eyes, ears, and throats. Safety precautions for the school buses, the cafeteria, and its menus also come under her supervision. She counsels and encourages girls interested in nursing as a vocation. "Annie" in her familiar white uniform is a welcome figure to ailing students. Her jolly, wholesome personality, as well as her technical skill, have meant a happier, healthier year at N.H.S.

Lunch in the high school cafeteria is not only economical but also nutritious. Mrs. Rice, cafeteria director, plans the menus, which are approved by Miss Livingston, the home economics teacher. Working in the spotless kitchen, the three cooks use modern equipment that assures careful preparation. They prepare meals for both the high school and South Side Grade School. Thus an average of four-hundred students and teachers are served each day.

These are the women working behind the scenes to give us those delicious hot meals: Mrs. Isabelle Rogers, Mrs. Ruby Miller, and Mrs. Loneta Rice, who is head cook.

Here is a typical lunchroom scene. Daily the school cafeteria hums with lively conversation as many students enjoy the hearty meals.

and supplies are essential.

Efficiency and friendliness are characteristics of the bookstore clerks, custodians, and bus drivers. They are the people behind the scenes who give us our supplies, keep our school clean, and get our rural students to school . . . on time.

The bookstore is open mornings and noons selling paper, pencils, notebooks, and all other supplies at nominal cost to the students. It also is the headquarters from which workbooks, supplementary to many courses, may be purchased.

Trying to keep our enviroment pleasing is a major undertaking when it entails all the little jobs that are demanded of the custodians at N.H.S. Eddie and Eldon accomplish practically every little job in the book from repairing the miniature parts of a pencil sharpener to waxing and polishing the acre of tile that we mark up every day; and they're never too busy to unlock the door after hours for a frustrated student who finds he has forgotten his chemistry book.

Without these personalities, our world of friends would not be complete.

Suzie Calbeck, Carol Hollar, Pam Phillips, Mrs. Inez Rogers, supervisor, and Linda Price worked in the school bookstore before school and at noon to sell pencils, paper, and other supplies.

Wayne Sechrist, Willard Reed, Ralph Fink, and Virgil Stump, standing; and Eldon Yoder, Tom Pletcher, and Noble Flowers, kneeling, are the dependable men who drive school buses.

Keeping the floors of the school shining was only a small job of the custodians, Edward Miller and Eldon Yoder. Whatever their duty was, you could be sure they did it well.

At last it's 1960...

We the graduating class of 1960 have now completed twelve years of education. The time has come to leave our beloved high school world and to strike out individually on separate paths of life. With us we will carry the memory of many unforgettable experiences, climaxed by those of our exciting senior year.

Special features of this year included conducting concession sales at wrestling matches and basketball games, selling candy, sponsoring a record hop, and presenting the traditional class play. All of these activities provided funds for the sensational senior trip to New York City.

Activities played a vital part in each senior's four years of high school. Those that were of major importance included music, sports, dramatics, publications, clubs, and class officerships.

George Freese, class president; Portia Mutschler, secretary-treasurer; and Mike Mitchell, vice-president, are looking over travel brochures, trying to decide exactly what features the senior trip to New York will include.

Juniors look

Martha Robinson, class president; Danny Geyer, vice-president; and Mary Duckwall, secretary-treasurer, are all anxious to see if Dan gets that date . . . or what ever the case might be.

We, the juniors, had a very busy and profitable year earning money for the 1961 class trip and planning the Junior-Senior Reception, which was given on May 20.

Reception committees were chosen in February, and they worked diligently until the very day of the exciting event.

The principal money-making project was the traditional magazine sales which added considerably to the class coffers.

We feel that this year has been very beneficial in many ways and are eagerly looking forward to our senior year.

More important '60's loom ahead.

We, the sophomores, found our second year in high school filled with many memorable events. The one that stands out most in our minds is the choosing of our class rings. Though sizes were measured and down payments were made, they will not be ours to wear until the beginning of our junior year. During the winter months we conducted the sale of Queen Anne turtles which was this year's principal means of increasing the class treasury.

Secretary-treasurer, Carol Hollar; sophomore president, Gary Schneck; and Joan Noffsinger, vice-president meet in the surge area for a chat between their classes.

We, the freshmen, began our high school career with enthusiasm. In the spring we ambitiously attacked our class project, which was the traditional paper drive. Through co-operation and hard work this effort proved to be profitable.

Here we've caught vice-president, Tod Lehman; freshman president, John Yeager; and Betty Martin, secretary-treasurer at the candy counter, stocking up on goodies for the day.

We, the eighth graders, began our activities early in the fall by selling concessions at the football games. Throughout the year we also sold candy during the noon hours. These projects provided funds for the educational trip to the Chicago museums. We feel we have profited from a variety of new experiences this year and are very glad to be a part of N.H.S.

Janet Lemna, class secretary-treasurer, waits patiently as Carolyn Mullet, vice-president gets a drink. Bob Best, president, is our gentleman holding the faucet.

Our World of ACTIVITIES

You have met the various personalities of N.H.S. and have had a glimpse of the type of work they carry on in the classroom throughout the school year. Let us now take a look into their extra-curricular life. A trip through the halls during activity period would acquaint you with their many clubs and organizations which add special interest to the daily schedule. Such activities encourage friendly associations with classmates, provide good training for leadership, and open up new worlds of interest.

The meeting progressed exactly as planned;
Clubs and societies both large and small,
Our World of ACTIVITIES, interests for all.

Portia Mutschler, secretary-treasurer; Mike Orn, vice-president; and George Freese, president of the society are discussing final arrangements for the "College Night."

High standards challenge students.

Members of the National Honor Society are selected by the faculty with scholarship, service, leadership, and character forming the basis for selection. Fifteen percent of each graduating class is eligible for this honor.

The society held the second annual "College Night" during the Christmas holidays. All juniors and seniors planning to attend college and all former students who were in college were invited to this social event held in the all-purpose room.

Under the direction of their sponsor, Mr. Weddle, the members completed a project which has been an undertaking for several years. They finished the plaques which display the names of honor society members since 1945 and placed them in the main foyer of the school. They feel this will stress achievements in academics. They also placed with these plaques the small engraved plaques of the valedictorians dating back to the class of 1947.

The members of the National Honor Society are automatically members of the student council and took a very active part in the council's work.

Students form their governing body.

The high school student council, a member of the National Association of Student Councils, was very active again this year with projects, programs, and discussions. They sponsored Nappanee High School's first homecoming and the crowning of the first homecoming queen. They hope that it will grow into a bigger project in the future, an annual event.

The council members were also responsible for holding locker inspections, selecting and presenting the year's assembly programs, decorating the Christmas tree, supervising cheerleader elections, and solving problems arising in our school.

To make the public aware of the academic achievement of the school, the council worked out the semester grade averages of the students, classes, and the entire school and published the results in the school paper.

Each underclassmen homeroom elected one person to represent the group on the council and the remainder of the membership of twenty-five was made up of juniors and seniors elected to the National Honor Society.

Portia Mutschler, secretary-treasurer; Gary Culp, council president, and Susie Templeton vice-president relax at the coke machine after a meeting.

The council purchased special pins for its members to wear on meeting days to make the student body aware of their representatives' commitment.

Variety enhances Senior and

The Senior Y-Teens had a wonderful year packed full of a variety of events. In the fall the seniors initiated the sophomores during the annual picnic at Mrs. Miles' cottage at Syracuse lake. For their projects the Y-Teens bought a blanket for the Nurse's office, helped with the February Heart Fund Drive, and spent many hours making decorations for the Mother-Daughter Banquet held in December.

Each program was new and different. Guest speakers with hobbies or occupations of special interest to the members entertained them. Other programs included a talk by the basketball coach, a movie, and a style show.

Joanne Slabaugh, treasurer; Joann Ingraham, secretary; Susie Templeton, president; and Gwen Fisher, vice-president, were the very capable leaders who helped make the year an outstanding one.

Junior Y-Teen clubs' programs.

The Jr. Y-Teens, composed of eighth and ninth graders, is an affiliate of the Young Women's Christian Association. Throughout the school year the club met bi-monthly for such programs as skits, movies, musical entertainment, panel discussions, games, and guest speakers. Service projects were the girls' principal accomplishment of the year. They also held two informal parties which provided special fun.

Mary Ellen Forsythe, vice-president; Cinda Schori, secretary-treasurer; and Janice Hollar, president, were the officers of the Jr. Y-Teens.

Clean speech, clean sports, clean scholarship, and clean living—this is the platform the Hi-Y clubs strive to achieve. By having local business men and professional men speak to them, they endeavored to reach another goal, a part of their purpose—to create a "High standard of Christian character." Other programs included movies, hobbiests, and a combined meeting with the Y-Teens.

Their chief money making project of the year was the coat and hat check at the basketball games. The club also conducted the annual clothing drive and took gifts to the Beatty Mental Hospital at Westville.

For their own enjoyment the boys went swimming at the Y.M.C.A. in Elkhart and had a party at the lake financed by the club's money-making project.

Devotions given at each meeting by the capable chaplain made the meetings more meaningful and added a special touch that is a dominant characteristic of the Hi-Y club, a member of the Young Men's Christian Association.

"The pause that refreshes" is enjoyed by the Sr. Hi-Y officers: Lee Hochstetler, chaplain; Phil Evans, secretary; George Freese, president; John Coppes, treasurer; and Roy McDonald, vice-president.

The membership of the Jr. Hi-Y is composed of eighth, ninth, and tenth grade boys. Two of their officers were sent to the training conference held during the 1959 summer. It proved very beneficial and the club plans to send more of its officers this year. These boys were given new ideas for Hi-Y work and learned ways of improving their club.

Many interesting programs throughout the year included such things as speakers, movies, and discussions. As a club project, at Christmas time the members sold cards and ornaments which increased the funds in the club's treasury.

By stressing a good Christian way of life, the club was helpful to all its members and influenced the molding of better characters.

The boys' quartet took part in the chorus concerts and received an excellent rating at the District Solo and Ensemble Contest in February. This small group also performed at many civic organizations during the year.

The boys' quartet, George Freese, Lewis Naylor, Lee Hochstetler, and Gary Culp, are prepared to favor us with some close harmony.

Approximately one hundred twenty-five students participated in the high school chorus this year. The group was under the direction of Mr. Jerald Robertson. Combining with the high school band, the chorus blended their voices for the annual Christmas Concert. On April 2 the chorus took part in the District Contest at Columbia City. As a climax to a wonderful, year, the group melodiously presented a Spring Festival on May 3.

Many individual members entered the Solo and Ensemble Contest, bringing home a number of honors. Other honors were awarded as letters to the senior chorus members who had been members of the organization for at least three years. These presentations took place during the Spring Concert in May. The chorus will lose the experience of twenty-six seniors, but hopes to gain many greenhorns.

The triple trio had a very successful year as they performed for many civic organizations as well as singing at the concerts. They entered both the District and State Solo and Ensemble Contests, winning superior ratings at each.

The triple trio is composed of nine talented girls who represent all four high school classes. They are, front row, Carolyn Yeager, Frances Fike, Dianna Evans, Diane Gardner, Portia Mutschler; back row, Sue Reprogle, Janet Burcham, Joann Ingraham, and Martha Stuckey.

Members of the mixed ensemble blended their voices for the concerts and several other engagements in the community. This group participated in the District Solo and Ensemble Contest and won the honor of entering the State Contest.

Harmony in the band includes more than harmonious music; there is no discord when the members co-operate in its endeavors, one of which was their band trip. This trip was the highlight of the year and included a tour through the Fort Wayne Art School and Museum, a concert at Union City, Indiana, an overnight stay in Muncie, and a rehearsal with Mr. Earl Dunn, director of the Ball State Teachers College bands. Their three concerts and final appearance at Commencement showed superior talents on the part of the players and director alike.

Along with the marching band which presented the half-time shows at the football games, the twirlers also contributed a special bit of entertainment for the fans. Connie, the drum majorette, was patient and served the band very capably for two years.

The band council is the representative group of the senior band. It is made up of the band officers and an elected member from each class. One of its functions was to help in making the rules for the band trip.

The drum majorette, Connie Haney, and twirlers Pam Phillips, Pat Masterson, and Connie Searfoss look chic in their new uniforms.

The members of the band council are Mary Duckwall, Kathlene Hepler, Lee Hochstetler, Don Peltier, John Coppes, Joanne Ingraham, and Portia Mutschler. They are demonstrating the many ways our versatile band uniforms can be worn.

The trainees for the senior band look forward to being a part of it. This band consists of eighth graders and freshmen. They presented a concert with the senior band; they spent many hours playing scales and drills striving for a better understanding of music.

Band at N.H.S. starts in the last of the sixth grade when those who are potential members begin the trial playing song flutes. Later they choose the instrument they wish to play, take lessons during the summer, and finally play as a group in the seventh grade band.

Napanet Staff maps "So Many Worlds."

The editors, Portia Mutschler, Martha Robinson, and Gary Culp, and sponsor, Miss Hoover, spent many long hours preparing the yearbook for the press.

Financially the Napanet was in capable hands with John Coppes, Suzie Calbeck, and Rob Lehman acting as business managers, and with Mr. Weddle the business advisor.

Studies, friends, activities, sports, and social life formed the core of the worlds of Nappanee High in the 1960 Napanet. Using Tennyson's words, "So many worlds, so much to do," as their theme, the staff produced a seventy-six page edition, four pages larger than the preceding year. Under the direction of Miss Hoover, Editor Gary Culp, Co-Editor Portia Mutschler, and the eleven members of the staff worked to capture the spirit of the school year. The financial management of the book was handled by Business Manager John Coppes with the assistance of his advisor, Mr. Weddle, and the other members of the business staff.

We who have spent many hours compiling and organizing information into an interesting, readable form, hope that you will appreciate our efforts to bring a memorable and informative account of the year 1959-60 in Nappanee High School.

Journalists sift school for news.

Our school paper, a bi-monthly publication, represents hours of work by the journalists who write frantically to get their assignments in on time for the editors and typists. After all the latest scoops and up-to-the-minute news of the happenings at N.H.S. are in, the two editors begin assembling them on dummy copies which are retyped on stencils by the speedy and efficient typists. This is only a portion of the work that goes into the publishing of our excellent paper, the D'Bulldog.

The Journalism Club, which is made up of the students who desire to write articles for the school paper, each year presents the semi-formal dance during the Thanksgiving vacation. This year it was given the title of "Holiday in Print," very appropriately named.

Books and reels bring new worlds.

Giving book reviews, mending books, and serving as student librarians were among the many activities of the members of the Library Club. In February the club enjoyed planning and presenting a party and program. For the evening's entertainment an interesting and unforgettable book review was given in costume on the life of Mrs. Abraham Lincoln.

The members of the club enjoyed serving the school with their responsibility in the library and working with the students who use our new library's excellent facilities.

The membership of the Projector Club consists of high school boys interested in showing films to various classes. This is done during the boys' study halls. These visual-aid enthusiasts were well trained in the proper techniques of manipulating and maintaining the projectors.

Because of our indispensable and growing visual-aids department at N.H.S., the services of these competent boys are necessary and they have fulfilled their responsibilities with great efficiency.

Various clubs cater to interests.

Students with particular interests satisfy their preferences by participating in the activities of numerous highly specialized clubs.

Opportunities for enriching the understanding of art, for acquainting the students with our Latin backgrounds, and for approaching a clearer comprehension of science are presented by these clubs.

The Palette and Brush Club, composed of forty girls, met bi-monthly for various types of programs. Most of these had to do with artistic hobbies which gave the group more appreciation of art. As a money-making project the club sponsored the Fall Hop.

Wow! can those G.A.A. girls play ball? That is, softball, basketball, volleyball, and just about any other girls' sport. Besides their regular Monday night meetings and after-school bowling, they participated in several "play days" with other schools. The highlights of the year were seeing the Globe Trotters and holding their Mother-Daughter Banquet at which time letters were awarded to those earning the required number of points. Janice Miller received the Senior Award, the highest honor given by the organization.

Judy Seidner, vice-president; Mary Frances Hoffer, secretary-treasurer; and Janice Miller, G.A.A. president, are looking over their year's calendar of events.

Girls and boys enjoy athletic clubs.

The membership of the Eighth Grade Sports Club is composed of boys interested in learning how to play a variety of minor sports not usually played in schools. Demonstrations of golfing and archery, and an explanation of hockey were program features. To finance their proposed trip to Chicago this coming summer to see a baseball game, dues were collected from the members who also sold concessions at several wrestling matches.

Our World of SPORTS

Although many students excell in academic work, some also are talented in the field of athletics. Through many hours of devoted practice and drill our teams repeatedly brought us victories. Training rules were carefully observed, and distinction in achievement resulted from teamwork and the spirit of good sportsmanship. Whether teams won or lost, N.H.S. was proud to have skilled athletes representing her.

Ten yards for a touchdown to tie the score;
A lay up, a basket and two points more;
Feet pounding after the starter's gun,
Hard work and sweat till the contest is won.

The fans of the Bulldogs are at it again,
Screaming and shouting to back up their men.
Team work and skill on the fields and courts,
So much to do in Our World of SPORTS.

Football initiates athletic seasons.

Under the capable direction of the new head football coach, Mr. Jerry Young, and his assistants, Mr. Don McKee and Mr. Jon Mayfield, the Bulldogs succeeded in giving N.H.S. another fine season. The grueling practice sessions, which began in mid-August and continued throughout the fall, proved to be well worth the while. On the gridiron the boys demonstrated a great deal of courage, skill, and nerve, and their enthusiastic team spirit showed well during the terrific battle against the Bremen Lions.

Senior, Jay Stouder, earned the honor of being placed on the All-Area Football Team. Nine other Nappanee football players made the All-Area Second Team or received honorable mention.

As the season's records show, two contests were lost by narrow margins, and one game was tied. However, the team's six victories far over-balanced these and were proof of the ability to respond to fine coaching.

The popular, hardworking coaches who directed the fighting Bulldogs through an exciting season are Don McKee, Jerry Young, and Jon Mayfield.

Steve Cleveland and Joe Schmeltz were the devoted, indispensable managers who sacrificed many long hours for the good of the team.

In the fall of 1959 Mr. Keith Dougherty took over the duties of varsity basketball coach for Nappanee High School. His well chosen squad consisted of seven seniors and three juniors, who combined their techniques and talents to provide an exciting season of thrills and heartbreakers. The first and last of the eighteen scheduled games were gratifying triumphs. The losses in between were interspersed with numerous victories. These were highlighted by a satisfying revenge against our Bremen rivals when the final buzzer assured our victory with the score 62-61.

Traditional "Hoosier Hysteria" took over during the two annual tournaments. The Bulldogs colored the Christmas vacation by winning the Holiday Tourney; however, they were forced to bow to the Goshen Redskins in the Sectional at Elkhart's North Side Gym.

Varsity coach Keith Dougherty and B team coach Don McKee earned the loyalty and respect of their teams and townsmen by their competent coaching throughout a difficult season.

Pups show promise for future varsity.

To coach Don McKee falls the tremendous task of giving members of the B team the training necessary for their future placement on the varsity. During their rugged practice sessions and difficult contests the boys were shown the necessity of hard work, accuracy, consistency, loyalty, teamwork, and enthusiastic spirit. Although it was a struggling season, it was very successful in giving the B team a great deal of valuable experience for use in years to come.

Cinders, chalk lines, taut tapes, cracking guns, and stop watches signified another portion of the athletic program at N.H.S. Through gradual building of speed and body co-ordination by hours of workouts, the thinlies brought honor to our school in a number of contests.

Though inclement weather got the Bulldog tracksters off to a bad start, as the season progressed it was evident that our team was rounding into a well developed one. There were six senior lettermen returning this year: Jan Cleveland, Chuck McFall, Lewis Naylor, Jay Stouder, Phil Evans, and Allen Wagner.

The dash and distance men coached by Mr. Jerry Young added many points to the team's scores as did the men in field events who were coached by Mr. Don McKee and Mr. Jon Mayfield. Two of the highlights of the season were the placing first in the Goshen Relays by the mile relay team: Jay Stouder, Steve Cleveland, Jan Cleveland, and Chuck McFall; and the posting of a new record of 53.4 seconds in the 440 yard dash, accomplished by Jay "Indian" Stouder.

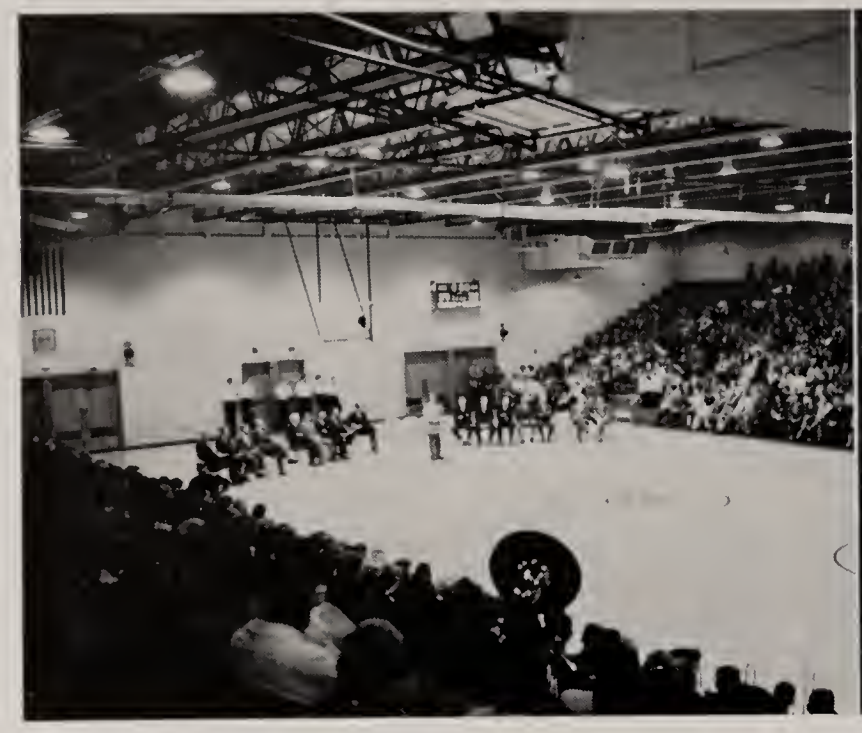
Top right. Allen Wagner specialized this year in the high jump, and succeeded in jumping his own height, 5' 8". Al, a senior, has given many underclassmen an inspiration and a goal toward which to work.

Bottom left. Jay Stouder, Jan Cleveland, Steve Cleveland, and Chuck McFall, our mile relay team, sped their way to several victories including their winning first place in the Goshen Relays.

Bottom right. Dan Geyer, a promising junior, broke no records this year but worked hard building up his arm and body co-ordination, hoping to make a good shot-put record next year.

School officials and fans dedicate gym.



Ceremonies marking the dedication of the East Side gymnasium spotlight the basketball season.

At the dedication game against Warsaw, Jim Stouder shoots for two points while several of his teammates watch hopefully.

Friday 13 held no ill luck for the Bulldogs. What could have been more fitting for a spacious gym with newly installed bleachers than a victory with which to commemorate its dedication?

Mr. John L. Longfellow, former Nappanee and Elkhart High School coach, was the principal speaker at the dedication ceremonies held between the halves of the varsity game. Community dignitaries including the Reverend Robert Fields, Superintendent Haskell B. Osborn, Principal James O. Weddle, Members of the Board of Trustees, and Members of the Community Building Corporation also participated in the program.

The gymnasium is used for a variety of other activities as well as basketball games. Musical concerts, assembly programs, science fairs, commencement exercises, and civic affairs are among the many functions scheduled in this expansive room.

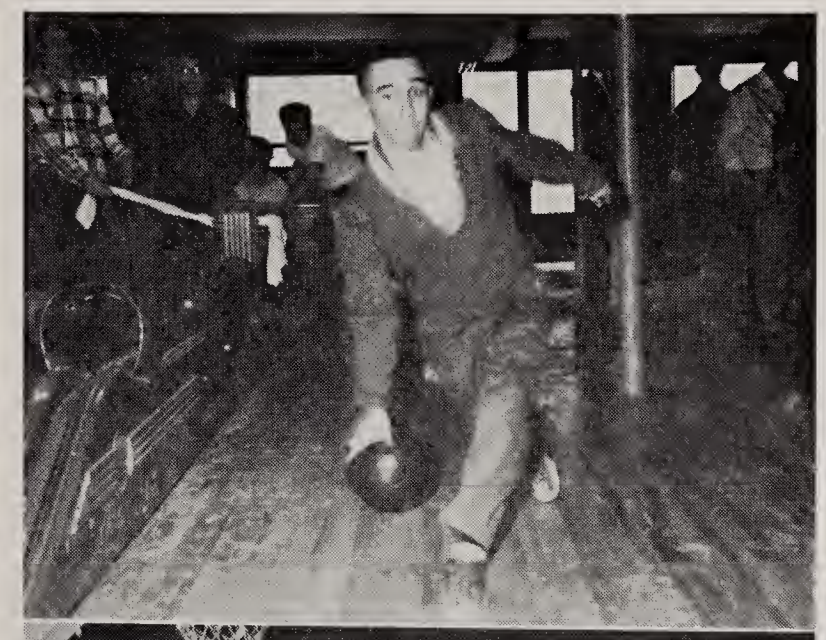
Action starts with this jump ball during the trying contest against the Culver quintet. (Right picture.) Chuck McFall and Jim Stouder are fighting to keep the rebound out of the hands of their Culver rivals.

An exciting moment during the Elkhart game finds the members of the pep club out of their seats and yelling wildly.

The pep band plays at all the home games and co-operates with the pep club in a variety of novelty yells.

Intramurals provide a sport for all.

The intramural program, directed this year by Mr. Jon Mayfield, gave sixty-five boys who did not participate on the high school basketball teams an opportunity to show their athletic abilities. Six teams, each consisting of four boys, bowled on Mondays after school. Each Wednesday evening the six basketball teams met in lively competition. Tournaments in both of these sports events climaxed the intramural activities of the year.



Kent Stuckman hopes for a strike to put his team out in front.

N-Men endorse a heavy schedule.

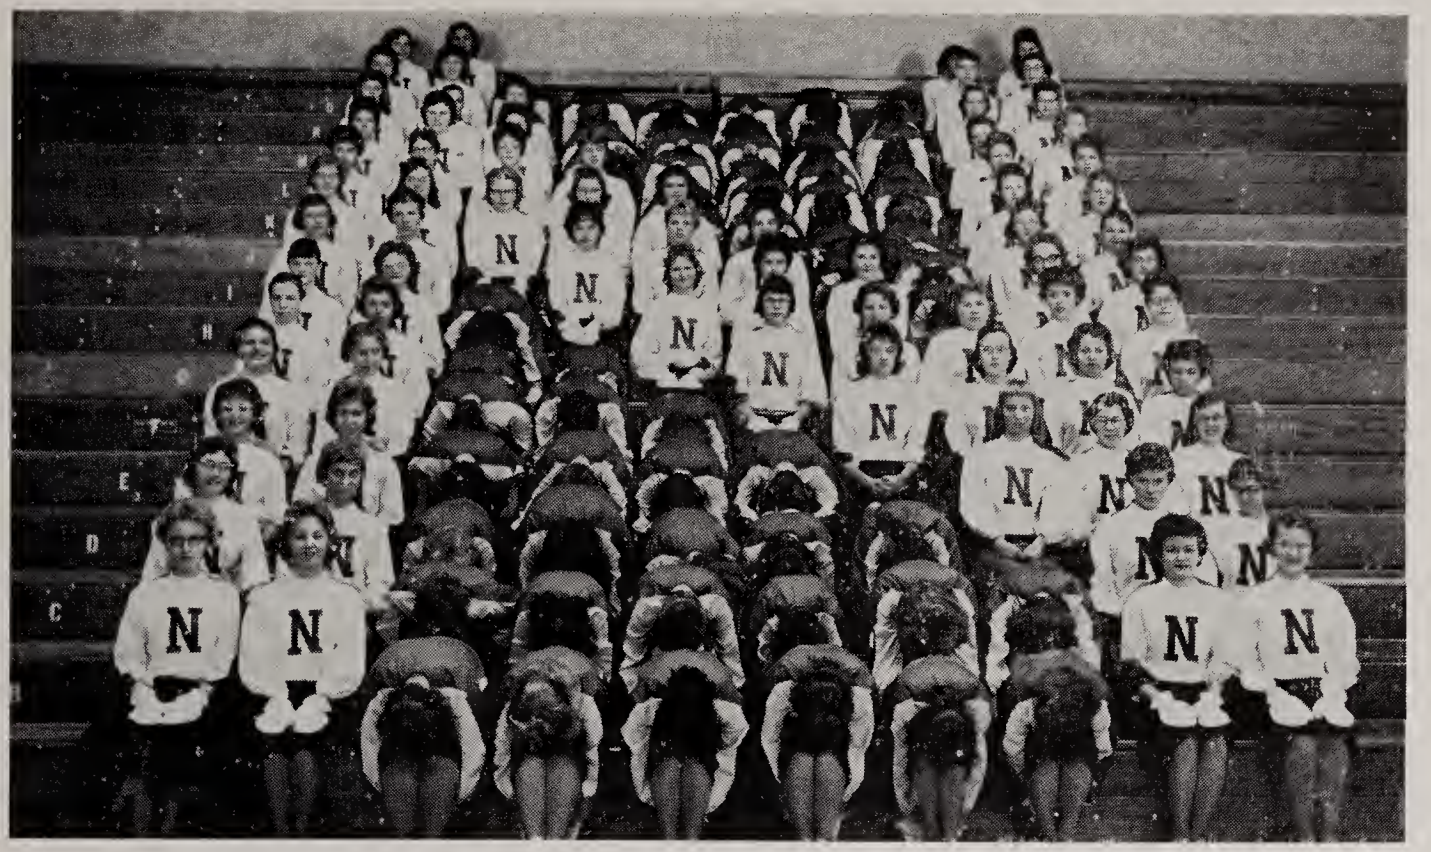
N-Men s officers, Jan Cleveland, Mike Mitchell, Rob Lehman, and Jay Stouder, are inspecting one of the new N-Men's jackets.

Winning a letter in any sport is the qualification for membership in the N-Men's Club.

The boys' first project of the year was a car-wash held in the fall.

During the winter senior members of the club were awarded the coveted N-Men's jackets.

The annual N-Men's Banquet, held in honor of the coaches and athletes, took place on March 11. Ara Parseghian, head football coach at Northwestern University, was the distinguished speaker at this event, and a number of boys received special recognition for outstanding athletic achievement: Jay Stouder, most valuable football player and most outstanding senior athlete; Gary Stutzman, basketball captain award, sharing the honor of most valuable basketball award with James Stouder; Jan Cleveland, free throw trophy; Douglas Weaver, most improved football player; and Steve Hockert and Phil Evans, co-captains in football.



"Give me an N," and its succeeding letters are a favorite yell of the enthusiastic block.

Organized cheering features yells.

A new addition to N.H.S. activities this year was the organized pep block. This club of nearly one hundred girls was a spectacular sight with each girl wearing identical blue and white jackets and matching gloves. The group traveled to several neighboring gymnasiums and participated in all the home basketball games where it formed a variety of words and letters and cleverly portrayed yells.

Seven peppy girls, the B-team and varsity cheerleaders, led and co-ordinated the yells and directed attention of the spectators toward the pep block. The varsity cheerleaders devoted a great deal of time to perfecting the performances of the group. On October 17 they traveled to Indiana University for the cheerleading conference and brought back with them many effective new ideas.

The pep club and cheerleaders owe a great deal of thanks to their worthy sponsor Mrs. Woodhams, who helped bring about their successful year.

Varsity Cheerleaders Pat Masterson, Linda Heckaman, Carol Hoffer, and Karen Sue George.

B-Team Cheerleaders Joan Noffsinger, Linda Price, and Carol Hollar.

Our World of SOCIAL LIFE

Without its galaxy of parties, receptions, dances and class projects our social world would seem dull and unimportant. The dance following the crowning of Nappanee High School's first Homecoming Queen inaugurated a series of memorable events throughout the year.

Interspersed were the Snowball and Valentine dances, club and class parties, Sadie Hawkins' Day, and the senior class play. The climaxing social event was the traditional Junior-Senior Reception and Prom in May.

What fun it was to dance and sing,
Play tricks, crack jokes, make laughter ring.
The prom, and plays, and parties, too . . .
Our SOCIAL world, so much to do.

Queen Portia Mutschler is receiving the crown from Miss Carolyn Miller during the Homecoming ceremonies at the halftime period of the Nappanee-Auburn football game.

The tense moment finally arrived; silence prevailed in the bleachers and the announcement of the name of our first Homecoming Queen was made in the poem, "The Sweetheart of N.H.S." The conclusion of the beautiful poem, which was set to music played by the high school marching band, revealed the name of our Queen; and Portia Mutschler was crowned 1959-60 Homecoming Queen by the 1958-59 Blue and White Queen, Carolyn Miller—truly "Moments to Remember."

Queen is honored at Homecoming Dance.

The first Nappanee High School Homecoming was introduced October 2, and included the Homecoming game with Auburn. The Student Council, through superior co-operation and hours of planning, conducted and sponsored the elections, half-time ceremonies, and the dance which followed the game.

Elections began two weeks prior to Homecoming. These included Queen's attendants from each underclassman class and three senior Queen candidates. The entire student body took part in the final voting, the day of Homecoming. During the half-time of the game the band presented an outstanding show with precision marching, using formations and music appropriately in harmony with the poem, "The Sweetheart of N.H.S." To give the night of special touch, the Bulldogs won a smashing victory over Auburn's eleven, 33-0.

As the evening's climax, the Homecoming Dance was held in the multi-purpose room of the high school. All students and alumni of N.H.S. were cordially invited; several hundred students and adults crowded the dance floor. The new Queen and her escort shared the spotlight in a dance in her honor, bringing to a close a wonderful evening which will live in her heart and the hearts of many people for years to come. This was our first Homecoming and the Council hopes that it will set the pattern for many more in the future.

Enjoying the music at the Homecoming Dance are Mr. and Mrs. James Beatty; she is former Terry Hamsher, 1954 Blue and White Queen; Donnie Rink and Connie Haney, and Mr. and Mrs. Joe Stillson.

Party time's a gay time . . .

Reception is no exception.

The enchantment of the West Indies was captured by the juniors in their 1959 Reception theme, "Calypso Capers." The atmosphere in the Athenian Ballroom of the Hotel Elkhart was set by the elaborate entranceway decorations which featured gigantic calypso instruments, flowers, and baskets of island fruits. The wall decorations portrayed life on the islands, and the table centerpieces displayed figurines of gaily dressed island people playing miniature calypso instruments.

After the banquet the Welcome was given by junior class president, Steve Price; the Response was presented by senior class president, Dick Pletcher; and the reading of the traditional Will and Prophecy followed. Then the guests were entertained by the mystics of the talented magician, William Powell. Continuing the evening's festivities the Senior Prom was held for those wishing to attend, with music provided by the Ben Mishler Orchestra.

Lou Ann Wyman, Maxine Welty, and Lewis Naylor read the imaginary last will and testament of the seniors.

Magician Powell perplexed the guests by baking a cake in Larry Nunemaker's coat pocket.

Linda Price, Terry Pippenger, Joann Ingraham, and Sarah Wright predicted the 1969 successes and failures of the senior class.

Gary Stutzman and Nancy Arch, and Carolyn Yeager and Lewis Naylor enjoyed themselves at the prom. The background was strictly "Calypso."

At the punch bowl were George Freese, Judy Lewis, Dick Conrad, and Susie Templeton. The dance was divine, the music was dreamy and the punch . . . delicious.

Holidays are filled with fun for all.

Each year three traditional dances are held—the Thanksgiving, Christmas, and Valentine. They all are given unique titles and lend a special air to these holidays. This year the Sadie Hawkins' Day Dance was added to the list. It, of course, was held on February 29, and was a very, very informal affair at which the sale of the Napanets was initiated. But, let's not get ahead of ourselves.

The first of the dances, held November 24, took the appropriate name of "Holiday in Print," and was sponsored by the Journalism Club. Everyone enjoyed dancing to the popular music of the Ri-fi at this semi-formal.

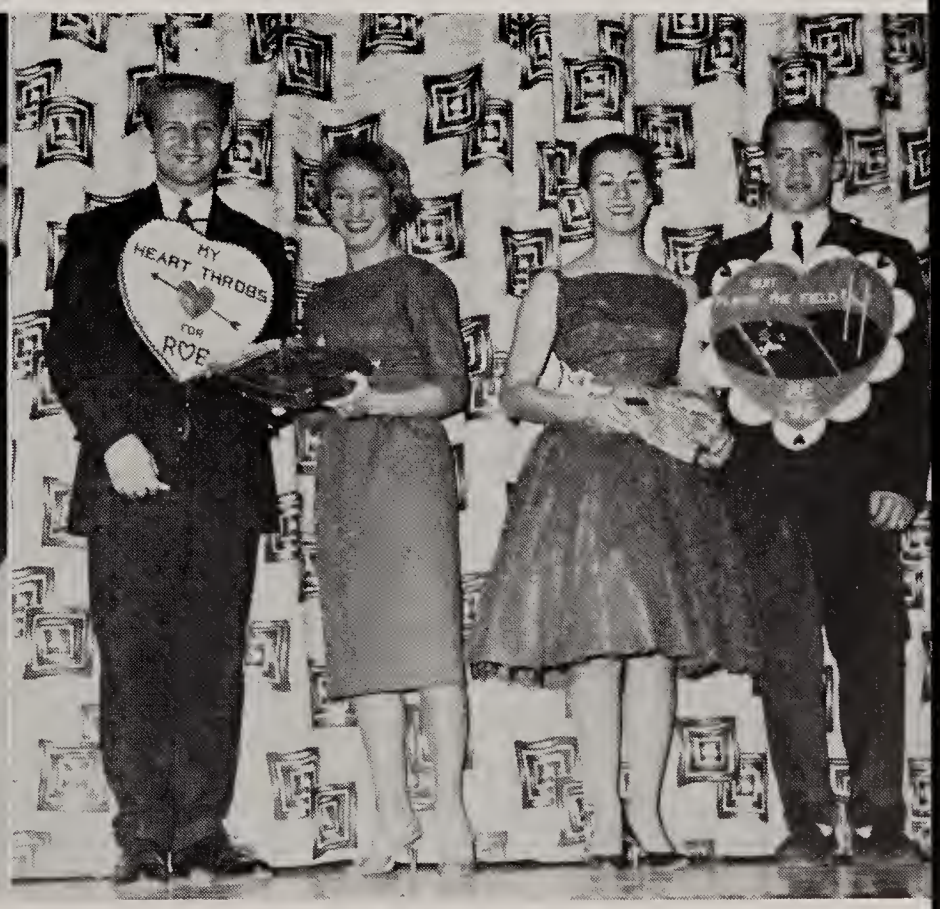
A little more on the formal side was the "Snowball," December 22. Snow, candles, and the music of the Belvedeers set the romantic scene glamorized by a large multicolored snowball and glittering ornaments suspended from the ceiling.

Moving on to Saturday night, February 13, we found ourselves enjoying the "Valentine Dance." This was a girl-ask-boy, semi-formal, and called for home-made corsages designed by the girls. Prizes were awarded to the girls whose creations showed the most originality.

Dick Pletcher, Terry Pippenger, Larry George, Suzie Calbeck, and Susie Templeton are shown around their table at the journalism dance, "Holiday in Print."

"I could have danced all night," was the sentiment of these couples as the "Snowball" came to a close. They are Rob Lehman, Mary Duckwall, Jill Stahly, Lewis Naylor, Elaine Pippenger, Steve Quigley, Jan Cleveland, and Carol Hoffer.

After a difficult decision to be made by the judges, the prizes for the most original corsages were awarded to Mary Duckwall, first prize, and Portia Mutschler, second prize. Their dates at the "Valentine Dance" were Rob Lehman and Gary Stutzman.



There were fads, fashions, fun, and finals . . .

Variety was the spice of our social life at N.H.S. Although the major social events were scheduled and planned long before the time of realization, our social ties were binding us together every day. As soon as a student entered the door to begin another day of school, friendly exchanges were being made through words, deeds, and actions. At noon, friends gathered after hearty meals to discuss the mornings happenings, last night's basketball game, or the latest fads in clothes and hair styles.

Our days were too busy and exciting to end with the three-thirty dismissal bell. Often there were committee meetings, athletic practices, music rehearsals, and students studying in the library after school. Our evenings were occupied with club parties, dances, play practices, and frequent athletic events which drew large crowds of fans, adults as well as students.

Our candid camera found some of our N.H.S. students in action as they carried on a well rounded day filled with study in the modern classrooms or quiet study corners at home and fun on the way to school or in the halls between classes. It also caught some fans at an exciting moment in a football game, the seniors in their Halloween skit, Y-Teen girls devouring the refreshments at their lake party, and above all, it captured the faces of many of the people who made our Social World complete . . . our friends.

Here's a frustrated fellow who fears he'll flunk finals.

Mike Orn studied late in preparation for his final exams. With research papers and other special assignments all deadlined for the same time, every senior was kept busy until his last day of school.

Fads and fashions, frills and laces;
Here are furs that frame fair faces.

The winter fad with many N.H.S. girls was the coat with a raccoon collar. They look quite chic on Judy Schori, Lou Ann Wyman, Terry Pippenger, Susie Templeton, Jenafie Biller, and Susie Neibert.

Here's a frightened female who found a fall-out . . . and fun.

"Watch out, Karen; that could be dangerous. Better be more careful about how you stack your books in your locker next time." Here are Karen Clouse, Linda Heckaman, Steve Price, and Jerry Elmore all enjoying a result of Karen's mishap.

fans and feasts, and finally . . . friends.

Finals meant burning the midnight oil,
But there were rewards for the hours of toil.
Football or basketball, or even a track meet,
All find our fans rising, their heroes to greet.
Fads and fashions would come and go,
But the fun we had will be remembered, we know.

The Halloween Festival was filled with fun,
The foolery included everything under the sun.
A feast at a party meant hot dogs and cokes;
Fun consisted of games and some practical jokes.
But what would the Worlds at N.H.S. be,
Without our friends working in close harmony?

Football fans display their faith in the team by boosting them to victory.

An exciting moment at a football game sends the fans of the Bulldogs to their feet

Foolery and fun are main features at the Halloween Festival.

Many of the seniors not taking part in the speech play have fun presenting a skit called "Boners' Schoolroom." Those shown here are Sarah Wright, Chuck Blevins, Bob Stouder, Terry Pippenger, and Steve Hockert.

A feast for the famished finds favor among femmes.

Well, maybe these girls aren't famished, but initiating the sophomore girls at the Y-Teen picnic made them hungry. They are Linda Price, Portia Mutschler, Marietta Holderman, Linda Heckaman, Susie Templeton, Lou Ann Wyman, and Judy Schori.

And finally . . . Friends.

Yes, friends finish our 'F' alliteration, and quite appropriately, too, for we could not have our fun, fads, foolery, nor fans without our friends.

Seniors and underclassmen work toward Clearing a back porch of an accumulation of newspapers are freshmen Dana Stickel, Susie Hartman, Betty King, and Alan Hand.

Mrs. Walter McDonald is purchasing candy from two enthusiastic sophomore salesmen, Kay Moore and Robin Wallace.

With one purpose in mind—New York City—the classes conducted their projects with enthusiasm and determination. Each class had a traditional money-making plan and then was allowed to schedule dances or to contrive other schemes to swell their treasuries.

The traditional project of the freshmen was their paper drive held in the early spring. Because basements and garages were bulging with the winter's accumulation of newspapers and magazines, the frosh had an opportunity to fill several trucks to overflowing.

The sophomores sold Queen Anne candies during the early winter months to supplement their accounts, and to put them on the second plateau in the climb to their senior trip.

The juniors conducted their magazine sales the first five weeks of school, selling subscriptions to the people of the community and surrounding areas. Prizes and certificates were awarded by the Curtis Publishing Company to students who had accomplished certain sales requirements.

Finally the seniors had the perennial candy sales of toffee, Katydids, and chocolate almonds. Their class play also contributed to their trip fund. By virtue of their sales of the Napanet, their selling concessions at home basketball games and wrestling matches, their sponsoring a record hop and the first Sadie Hawkins' Dance, and their making a few small payments individually, they had sufficient resources to finance their long awaited five-day trip to New York City.

Recording the day's progress in the magazine subscriptions sales is a duty of the junior homeroom captains, Sandra Martz, LaVonda Stahley, and Stan Lopp.

Seniors Charles Blevins, Phil Evans, George Freese, Suzie Calbeck, Joe Schmeltz, Connie Haney, Rita Nettrour, and Leota Knight await the halftime sale of concessions.

ultimate goal . . . their senior trip.

Seniors present . . . "Creeping Shadows."

On April 21 and 22, the hard work of the cast and director finally reached its climax as the seniors of '60 presented the mystery-comedy, Creeping Shadows.

Kit Laughton (Linda Price) inherited an old country home called Elm Lane from her uncle. Her aunt, Mrs. Frazier (Connie Haney) and family decided to move in and help Kit make a tourist resort out of it. Mr. King (Dick Conrad), Anna (Portia Mutschler), and Buck (Steve Hockert)—three crooks who live next door—discovered that there was oil on Kit's property, and determined to get rid of the family and buy them out; they caused many creepy things to happen. Through these strange experiences, Kit and her friends, Cherry (Susie Templeton), Jack Hunter (Mike Mitchell), Bill Frazier (Chuck McFall), and Ted Garvey (Gary Culp) met many unusual people—tourists, friends, an oil prospector . . . and spooks.

Under the capable direction of Mr. Don McKee the talented cast of twenty-six, brought a challenge to themselves and enjoyment to their audiences.

"I see your grandmother wears men's shoes."

"I found Anna at the top of the stairs standing still and looking dazed."

"Madam, need you ask? Can't you see, I am—Napoleon!"

Prompters, backstage crew, prop managers, and a ticket sales manager are all needed to make a play a success. Seated are Allen Corwin, Marietta Holderman, Judy Schori, and Chuck Blevins. Standing are Kent Stuckman, Joanne Slabaugh, James Rood, and Lee Hochstetler.

"Ted, Ted! Oh is he . . . ?"

"I don't like your looks or actions, Mr. Wade!"

"You think we're all a pack of nit-wits in the country, don't you, Mr. Jack Hunter?"

Jack, unjustly suspected as a fugitive from the law, receives his life sentence.

Senior Week climaxes four eventful years.

Senior week brings to a close four wonderful and busy years of high school life for seventy-two Nappanee High School seniors. Some of these graduates will look back upon this week and treasure most the seriousness of Baccalaureate services; others will cherish the gaiety of the prom, the packing for the senior trip, or the finality of Commencement.

Doubt, a little fear, and a lot of curiosity accompany these young adults as they face the world on their own for the first time. As they return from their trip to New York City, the week after graduation, a sad note will be played in their lives as the good-byes that must be said set them forth on their separate ways.

Though successes and failures may crowd the future of many of these young people, they will never forget the Blue and White for which they shared enthusiasm, the school where they shared in learning, the parties they shared in fun, and the projects in which they shared in work. These are the moments that will live in the memories of these graduates as they set out from N.H.S.

Senior Week plans began long months before the realization of those special activity filled days. In the first picture our typical N.H.S. senior, Carolyn Yeager, is enjoying a coke with a group of friends. Their topic of conversation is possibly the choice of a class flower and motto.

Senior Class Night will call for an especially smart informal dress. In the second picture, Sarah Wright and Lou Ann Wyman are expressing their opinions about a print creation Carolyn is considering.

Measuring for the caps and gowns is one of the preliminaries for Senior Week. Here in the third picture Carolyn is watching Mrs. Phillips stretch to determine the length of a graduation gown needed by a tall senior fellow, Charles Blevins.

Though the senior trip will not begin for three days after graduation, a few anxious seniors packed some of the unmentionables early. From all appearances in the fourth picture, Carolyn will have to sit on Joann Ingraham's suitcase to help her close it.

Wrinkled robes need pressing after Baccalaureate services in anticipation of Commencement. Connie Haney, Rita Nettrour, and Carolyn find an ironing board and begin the task.

Finally Commencement night has arrived and these seniors Carolyn, Roy McDonald, and Pauline Ketzel are already dressed for the occasion.

So Many Worlds To Remember

Although our book of high school life has come to its finale, to the seniors its sequel is just the beginning of another life in an entirely different world. Yes, these have been the many worlds in which we lived for four wonderful years of high school life, but they are drawn to a halt by graduation, ushering in many new worlds, giving meaning to our motto, "Your future lies ahead; make it what you will!"

There were So Many Worlds,
So Much To Do,
In this eventful year we've just lived through.
From this May, back to last September,
Our senior year gave us
Worlds To Remember.

But now the time has come to part,
And on our separate paths we'll start
To live our future with tasks anew,
Where we'll find So Many Worlds,
So Much To Do.

" 'Tis not too late to seek a newer world."
—Alfred Lord Tennyson

Our valedictorian, George Freese, and salutatorian, Portia Mutschler, wonder with the rest of the class of '60 what the future will have in store.

We gratefully wish to express our regard
To our staff, who learned quickly and worked very hard,
To the Napanet workers who brought the book through
And never complained they had too much to do.
While listing our debits, we feel that we owe
Particular thanks to the people below.

Miss Esther M. Hoover, our production and staff advisor
Mr. James O. Weddle, our principal
Mr. Robert "Jorg" Sutula, professional photographer
Evangel Press, Nappanee, Indiana
Ropkey Engraving Company, Indianapolis, Indiana

And so in conclusion we happily own
That we certainly could not have done it alone.

Thank you,
The Editors
